

Having heard stories from several different reputable hunting sources, it was time to visit Glen Dene Station myself. STORY AND IMAGES: TONY PIZZATA

Glen Dene Red Stag

GLEN Dene station is situated on the South Island of New Zealand between the shores of Lake Hawea and Lake Wanaka. Covering some 15,000 acres, it is a working deer, sheep and cattle farm and is also home to a variety of wildlife, some of which include wild ram, red deer, fallow deer, chamois and also tahr on adjoining properties to which they have access. Trophy hunting begins around February and runs through to late October with packages to suit solo or group hunters, families or corporate gatherings. They also offer some excellent trout fishing.
